Dividend Procedure

With a wide range of dividend distributing share classes for several Sub-funds, a dividend procedure is established to explain the basic principles of the dividend distribution. A distinction is made in funds domiciled in Luxembourg, the Netherlands and Ireland.

Luxembourg domiciled funds

In Luxembourg investment funds are not legislatively compelled to distribute profits in forms of dividend. There is a distinction between the accumulation share classes and distribution share classes. Accumulation share classes will reinvest the received income automatically and the distribution share classes may distribute from capital or income based on the methodologies applied.

Distributing share classes

Robeco offers different types of distributing share classes in its current range of Luxembourg funds. The variation in these share classes is based on the frequency of payment and the target client group. The table illustrates the most representative types of the distributing share classes. These share classes can be combined with additional attributes currency-hedging. For Monthly and Quarterly distributing Share Classes denoted by an additional letter “y” and “z”, the dividend level is determined by the company. Class “y” considers both the dividend distribution and the expected capital appreciation for determining the dividend target ratio. Class “z” refers to a customized dividend target ratio agreed with the client. The availability of “y” and “z” distributing share classes is at the sole discretion of the company, with the applicable dividend ratio subject to regular review and potential adjustment.

*Aimed Distribution Frequency

Annual distributing share classes

The annual distributing share classes are aimed to accommodate investors and markets which favour dividend payments based on the actual received income. The calculation of the dividend pay-out for the annual distributing share classes is derived from the income after deduction of fees and costs attributable to the specific share class:

$$\text{payable dividend per share} = \frac{\text{Income} - \text{costs}}{\text{number of outstanding shares}}$$

The dividend pay-out will be calculated after the end of each financial year. The amount of the dividend pay-out may fluctuate from year to year. If the calculated distribution amount for a share class is negative, no dividend may be distributed for this share class. Any exceptional cases beyond the standard methodology will be documented or noted in the dividend dates.

Monthly and Quarterly distributing share classes

The monthly and quarterly distributing share classes are aimed to accommodate investors and markets which are seeking for stable and consistent level of income. A target dividend ratio is being used to determine dividend pay-out, such target dividend ratio is determined to reflect expected income or yield of the relevant portfolio. For equity funds, the target dividend ratios of the relevant share classes are set based on expected gross income of the relevant portfolios. For fixed-income funds, the target dividend ratios of the relevant share classes are set based on the (currency hedged) yield levels of the relevant portfolios. Any exceptional cases beyond the standard methodology will be documented or noted in the Dividend Dates.

The target dividend ratio is reviewed on a yearly basis, but for a selected number of fixed-income funds the ratio is reviewed and adjusted on a quarterly basis to ensure alignment with prevailing yield levels. However, there is no guarantee that the dividend is precisely in line with the realized level of income of the share class.

Payment of dividend

In principle the dividend pay outs take place in predefined months. The Board of Directors may decide to pay interim dividend payouts in different times than the predefined months. The annual (interim) dividend payout of a financial year takes place in the month April of the subsequent year. The quarterly (interim) dividend pay-out takes place in the months: March, June, September and December of the financial year.

The Netherlands domiciled funds

In the Netherlands the distribution of profit in form of dividend depends on the fiscal regime of the fund. Investment funds that fall under the FBI regime (fiscale beleggingsinstelling) are legally obliged to distribute profit within eight months after the end of the financial year unless the profit can be allocated to the so-called reinvestment reserve. Investment funds that fall under the VBI regime (vrijgestelde beleggingsinstelling) will not distribute profit in form of dividend.

Dividend procedure

The investment fund under the FBI regime will distribute profit for each share class, after withholding 15% Dutch dividend tax, taking into account the profit available for distribution based on so-called mandatory distribution.

The dividend pay-out will be calculated after the end of each financial year. The amount of the dividend pay-out may fluctuate from year to year and could also be zero in a financial year. The Board of Directors may decide at their discretion to pay out interim dividends as well as a higher dividend amount than the so-called mandatory distribution.

Payment of dividend

The amount of dividend to be distributed takes place at proposal of the board of directors of the investment fund and the AGM decides on the dividend payment.

Ireland domiciled funds

In Ireland investment funds are not legislatively compelled to distribute profits in forms of dividend. There is a distinction between the accumulation share classes and distribution share classes. Accumulation share classes will reinvest the received income automatically and the distribution share classes may distribute from capital or income based on the methodologies applied.

Distributing share classes

Robeco offers distributing share classes in its current range of Irish funds. The amount of the dividend pay-out may fluctuate in each dividend period, and is targeting the amount from the income after deduction of fees and costs attributable to the specific share class:

$$\text{Payable dividend per share} = \frac{\text{Income} - \text{costs}}{\text{number of outstanding shares}}$$

The Manager may implement income equalisation arrangements with a view to ensuring that the level of income derived from Investments is not affected by the issue, switching or redemption of Shares during the relevant accounting period.

Payment of dividend

In principle the dividend payouts take place in predefined months, and frequency varies by sub-fund, as defined in the Supplements to the Prospectus. The Board of Directors may decide to pay interim dividend payouts at different times to the predefined months. The semi-annual (interim) dividend pay-outs take place in January and July. The quarterly (interim) dividend pay-outs take place in January, April, July and October.
